ESTANCIA LOS POTREROS 2024

RIDE INFORMATION

Estancia Los Potreros is a 6,500 acre working cattle farm in the heart of the beautiful region of Cordoba, some 500 miles to the north west of Buenos Aires. Situated in the “Sierras Chicas” at an altitude of 3,000 feet, Los Potreros has been owned by the same Anglo-Argentine family for four generations and the main house is steeped in family history. It is now run by Kevin Begg, who personally oversees the ranching, riding and guest activities on offer, taking huge pride in sharing the land and lifestyle he loves with his guests. The estancia is well located in its own, utterly peaceful, un-touristed countryside yet is easily accessible, just 30 miles from the university city of Cordoba. With over 90 riding horses and a maximum of just 12 guests at one time, it is a fantastic base for keen riders wanting to experience authentic rural argentine life and gaucho culture and, with a perennially warm welcome, lovely walking, bird watching and wild swimming, as well as wine tasting, mountain biking, excellent golf courses and historic buildings to visit locally, it makes a great base for non-riders too.

DATES

Los Potreros is open to guests year round except for May and June when it normally closes for renovations. You can stay anything from 3 nights to 2 weeks, with a minimum of 7 nights generally recommended to give you time to settle in, enjoy the activities on offer and scenery further afield. (Over Christmas & New Year the minimum stay is usually 5 nights). Dates are flexible and organised to suit, although Sunday afternoons are set aside as rest time so there is only riding on Sunday mornings. There are set dates for special 'Learn to Play Polo' weeks - see dates overleaf and contact us to discuss your plans. The estancia can be booked privately for groups of 6 or more adults (or 4 adults and 4 children), making it a wonderful option for a group of friends or two or more families.

HORSES

There are about 130 horses in all at Los Potreros including breeding mares and foals. The horses are Criollo (the local Argentine breed) and Criollo crosses (some with the estancia's own Thoroughbred stallion) of between about 15hh and 16hh and there are also a number of Peruvian Paso horses many of which are home bred using the estancia's Paso stallion. Paso horses, originally bred for covering the huge distances on large Peruvian estancias at the most comfortable gait possible, were first brought to Los Potreros by Kevin's father Robert. They have a natural 4 beat lateral gait, a unique characteristic that was developed and has been preserved through selective breeding and which makes a pure bred Paso horse the smoothest and most comfortable riding horse in the world. Now nearly half the horses at Los Potreros have Paso blood and the estancia's current award-winning stallion, Andariego Corregidor (affectionately known as Supermario), is always keen to show off in front of a crowd. Criollo horses arrived in Argentina with the Spanish and still are widely used for working cattle. They are strong and sensible but also extremely responsive, athletic and forward going making them a real pleasure to ride.

TACK

All the horses at Los Potreros are ridden in the traditional South American (western) style so are used to neck reining and go best when ridden with a loose contact with the mouth. Saddles are British military style, usually with an extremely comfortable sheepskin on top, some polo saddles are also available, as well as gaucho & Chilean style saddles - so quite a choice! Saddle-bags are provided for longer rides.

RIDING

The riding at Los Potreros is very flexible, with hours tailored as far as possible to suit. There are morning and afternoon rides out each day (no riding on Sunday afternoon) as well as long picnic rides to explore and if you wish you can ride for 4 to 6 hours a day, or equally you might choose to join just a morning or afternoon ride of between 2 and 4 hours. For groups staying 5 nights or more, a 2 day mini-expedition may be another option, riding out for the day and spending a night in rustic farmstead accommodation at the far perimeter of the estancia. There are also opportunities to try your hand informally at polo; 'stick and balling' sessions with the gauchos are usually offered on one morning each week, with more intensive 'polo-centric' weeks also available from set dates (or by prior request for groups). You can also test your horsemanship by joining the gauchos in 'Destrezas de gaucho' - gaucho games - racing for the 'sortijo', barrel racing and the like, with their cattle work, helping round up cattle for sorting or a head count and rounding up the yearling horses. Riding groups are small, generally a maximum of 8 guests (usually less), with riders divided according to ability and all rides are led by an experienced English speaking guide with helpers on hand to look after the horses at all times.

WEIGHT LIMIT

There is a weight limit of 95kgs / 15 stone. .

PACE

The pace of the riding at Los Potreros can be varied to suit, with plenty of opportunities for fast canters and also for more relaxed riding for those who prefer. Some routes are rugged and quite steep in places with narrow paths through scrub and woodland where the pace has to be slow, but there also lots of open plains, grassy valleys and soft dirt tracks that are ideal for exhilarating canters. The pace is relaxed but well varied overall.

RIDING EXPERIENCE

Los Potreros is ideally suited to reasonably experienced riders who wish to explore the surrounding country on a responsive, well-schooled horse and who are comfortable, relaxed and secure in the saddle at a walk, trot and fast canter. To get the most from the riding and horses you should be used to riding in open country and over varied terrain as there is a variety of going - grassy plains, narrow tracks through the scrub forest, rugged hills to climb and small streams to cross. The estancia is however, also a good choice for less experienced riders with a good selection of horses to suit riders of different abilities and, as the riding hours and pace can be adapted to suit, novice and less experienced riders are also well catered for. Children are welcome but the minimum age is 10yrs and children wishing to ride should have previous riding experience and be able to control a horse independently. You will in any case, enjoy the riding much more if you are fairly riding fit so if you don't ride regularly at home, we recommend you accustom yourself to the hours in the saddle with some regular training before you go.

POLO

While not a dedicated polo estancia (the hills don't help), Los Potreros has strong connections with the game. Part of the estancia was once owned by polo legend Lewis Lacey, one of the world's first 10 goal players and one of the few to have played polo for both Great Britain and Argentina -also the man credited with 'inventing' the polo shirt as we now know it. The aim of the polo at Los Potreros is to encourage you to start playing this fast invigorating game, to build on any skills you may already have and for you to leave bursting to play more. One morning each week is usually given over for all guests to play polo (weather permitting) and extra sessions can be arranged by prior request. The 'Learn to Play Polo Weeks' are aimed at the beginner, novice or occasional player. Bespoke Polo packages with tuition can be arranged on request, minimum 2 guests. Please contact us for further details.

OTHER ACTIVITIES & FAMILY HOLIDAYS

Los Potreros is a super choice for families and for non-riders as well as riders. The estancia offers some wonderful walking, with several peaceful routes through the hills to explore river valleys and rocky canyons, to watch the exotic bird life, swim and picnic by a waterfall. Learning to lasso with the gauchos, watching their horsemanship roping cattle or playing the gaucho game of 'pato' and racing for the 'sortija' is fun for all - even if you do not join in; there are often informal wine tastings, the swimming pool is a lovely place to relax cont.

and mountain biking and cooking lessons can also be arranged. There is an international paragliding site close to the estancia, world-class dove shooting and three excellent golf courses in the vicinity as well as fishing of sorts. The estancia setting is remote but a taxi ride or a lift can take you shopping to Rio Ceballos (13 km), to La Falda (17 km) or La Cumbre (35 km) or you might arrange a day trip to Cordoba, an interesting University city, or take time to visit some of the areas many Jesuit churches, Estancia Santa Catalina (founded in 1662) or the dam at Embalse San Roque. Depending on the time of year, there may well be other local fiestas and attractions such as the folkloric festival at Cosquin, the Rodeo at Jesus Maria or one of many smaller annual cattle sales or branding festivals. Children are welcome at Los Potreros and thrive on the peaceful rural freedom, swimming in rivers, natural rock pools and waterfalls, rounding up horses and cattle, playing polo and 'gaucho games' and riding with the gauchos, who are fun and natural teachers and eating wonderful home-grown food. It is an ideal destination for a family holiday.

TERRAIN

The Sierras Chicas rise to a height of 7,500 ft, running parallel to the main Andes. They are an older mountain range than the Andes with some varied terrain and wonderful views onto the 'pampas' below. The lower slopes are forested, mostly with acacia, cocos and molles, then as you climb higher, the trees become smaller and the forest more patchy, with clearings of tussock and pampa grass. Higher still, the hills are barren but for the 'paja brava', a hardy tussock grass which grows at high altitude and provides cattle with grazing in winter when there is nothing else left. The hills hide rocky valleys, open meadows carpeted with wild flowers and dramatic gorges with waterfalls. There is always an interesting variety of bird life including vultures, eagles, partridges, doves, several different kinds of parrot, the tiny burrowing owl, brightly coloured humming birds and the mighty Andean Condor is slowly returning to the area. Foxes and hares are often seen whilst riding and puma, wild boar and small deer

ACCOMMODATION

Accommodation at the estancia is simple but comfortable, providing you with all creature comforts whilst retaining a wonderful feel of history and authenticity. The estancia itself consists of several buildings, all whitewashed and single storey in the traditional style, and some bedrooms are separate from the main house. All are preserved as much as possible in the original colonial style and furnished in keeping, with tiled floors, rugs and original furniture and fittings. There are 7 bedrooms in all, each with wood burning stove or fireplace to take the chill off the mountain air and all with private bathroom (with either bath or shower) - again fittings are from another era but it works well and there is plenty of hot water! Extra touches to make you more comfortable, such as hot water bottles when needed, cosy dressing gowns and good quality bed linen have all been thought of. Electricity is supplied by wind turbine with a diesel generator for back up. The Begg family and staff make you feel extremely welcome and the atmosphere is always relaxed and informal. Guests have free use of the drawing room - ideal for relaxing by the fire or meeting for drinks before dinner - and the swimming pool (not heated so generally only used in summer months) is a lovely place to relax after riding with views across open fields. Meals are either eaten 'al fresco' on the veranda or at a long table in the dining room (and with Argentines traditionally eating late, children served earlier and separately from adults). The maximum number of guests staying at any time is 12, although the estancia can be booked privately for groups of 6 or more.

MEALS

Food is excellent and a high point of any stay, with bread baked daily, organic fruit and home-grown vegetables, home-made pasta and plenty of delicious Argentine beef a regular feature. Days start with a cooked breakfast for those who wish or you might choose muesli with yoghurt, fruit, bread, toast and homemade jam. Lunch and dinner are often a traditional Argentine 'asado' (barbecue) with delicious home reared beef or lamb, accompanied by fresh salads, home-made bread and cheese, washed down with Argentinean wine. Los Potreros have their own label of locally made wine and the various local grape varieties make for interesting wine tasting - Kevin is always delighted to share his appreciation of local wines. Vegetarians will be well catered for - the estancia cooks take great pleasure in creating delicious meals of all kinds - but please give us prior notice of any special dietary requirements.

WEATHER

Cordoba is known for its good weather and healthy climate - 'siempre de temporada' (always in season) is the old slogan and the estancia is open to guests all year round (except sometimes in May / June when repairs / improvements are often carried out). The climate can vary but it is generally sunny and dry, particularly from April to October, the winter months. The Argentine summer, November to March, is the rainy season although rain is generally not intrusive and it is still often sunny. In June, July and August, it can be cold at night but is usually warm and sunny in the middle of the day - average temperatures for January, the hottest month are between 17 and 30 degrees C, and during July, the coldest month, between 5 and 17 degrees C. The sun can be very strong so hats and good sun protection are recommended year round.

WHAT TO BRING

We will send you a list when you book.

ITINERARY

Itineraries for a stay at Los Potreros are flexible and tailored to suit. The following is an example for a 7 night stay - although do note that it is just an example, some activities are weather dependent and day-by-day arrangements may be altered by your hosts in their discretion. Please ask if you would like an example of the 7 night Bellstone progressive ride.

Day 1 You will be collected from Cordoba Pajas Blancas Airport and driven about an hour to Los Potreros (Check-in from 14.00). Meet your hosts over a cup of tea before being introduced to the gauchos and horses. Then, if time allows, join a late afternoon ride for your first taste of the stunning landscapes you'll explore over the next week. There's a surprising variety of terrain on and around the 6500 acre estancia, with rocky outcrops looking out to open rolling hills, woods and grassy valleys that lead to hidden waterfalls. Ride back to base as the sun sets for a delicious candle-lit dinner - a tradition every evening - and opportunity to discuss plans for the rest of your stay. Night Los Potreros. (D)

Day 2 Breakfast and your first morning ride heading across tussock-grass ('paja-brava') plains and climbing to the high points of the ranch where there are good chances to try your horse at all paces whilst you admire the incredible views. Return to base for a leisurely lunch - perhaps a typical Argentine 'asado' (barbecue) which is always a real feast, prepared with great care and several different cuts of home-reared meat to try. The afternoon to relax by the pool or take a leisurely walk, then watch the sun go down with an evening drink on the 'Patio Verde' or there might be time for an evening drive - or if the moonlight allows you may even ride - to a high point of the ranch to see the lights of the city of Cordoba in the distance. Night at Estancia Los Potreros. (B,L,D)

Day 3 Breakfast before mounting up again to set off riding across country, passing the 'Canada de los Condores' (Canyon of the Condors) where condors are sometimes seen. A picnic lunch at the waterfall and chance to swim if the water is warm enough and sunbathe on the rocks. In the afternoon, ride back to the estancia by a different route for dinner and the night. (B,L,D)

Day 4 Today you might head out with the gauchos for a taste of working estancia life, perhaps riding to where the much prized herd of pure Aberdeen Angus cattle graze, taking salt out, rounding up strays or helping moving the herd into corrals for vaccinations or a head count - it's wonderful to see the gauchos' skilful horsemanship in their home environment and great fun attempting to help them. Back to the Estancia for lunch, always made using the freshest ingredients, with home produced organic fruit, veg and eggs and home-made bread and pasta. In the afternoon, ride to the pretty Dominican church, listening out on the way for the sound of the 'church bell stone' that inspired the bell-shaped cattle brand mark used on the farm and then, as dusk approaches, help round up the yearlings, herding them into a corral for the night to protect them from the elusive puma. Dinner and night (B,L,D)

Days 5 to 7 Three full days with a choice of morning, afternoon or picnic rides each day. There may also be a chance to try your hand at polo, a little low key 'stick and ball' is the perfect introduction to this addictive, fun and fast moving game; you may be able to watch the Peruvian Paso stallion being put through his paces or try a lasso lesson with the gauchos - it's harder than it looks - then challenge them at the "destrezas de gaucho" (gaucho games), racing for the 'sortija', barrel racing and other competitions are great fun for all. For those who wish, there are also options for mountain biking, Pato, the estancia cooks are always willing to offer a cooking lesson, showing you how to make traditional favourites such as empanadas, and paragliding, town visits or a game of golf can be arranged locally (additional charge). There may also be a local 'rodeo' or other colourful local fiesta, that will be well worth a visit. Three nights Los Potreros (B,L,D)

Day 8 Breakfast and check-out by 10.00 then transfer to Cordoba airport for your onward flight. (B)
