

RIDE WORLD WIDE INDIA 2025-2026

RIDE INFORMATION

These rides take place in Rajasthan, west of Delhi, a geographically varied area comprising the Thar Desert, the Aravalli mountains and large areas of semi-desert scrub. Historically this is one of India's richest regions. It includes the former kingdom of Marwar, the capital of which was Jodhpur and is dotted with ancient forts and magnificent palaces that were the private homes of royal princes. Rides are organised with Raghuvendra Singh, known as 'Bonnie', an ex-Indian army officer and now one of India's top breeders of Marwari horses as well as an accomplished polo player. Bonnie has a stable of 30 or so horses at his family home, Dundlod Fort which is the starting point for most rides. He is a knowledgeable, charismatic guide and together with his daughter Mallyka who has now joined him in promoting the Marwari horse and their excellent team of staff, will show you the whole spectrum of life in Rajasthan. From the peasant farmers who eke out a living in the dusty scrub and desert, the simple, traditional subsistence villages you ride past, to the splendid, privileged life of the royal princes and ancient aristocratic families whose historic homes open their doors to you. The combination of Bonnie's wonderful horses and horsemanship, the insiders' knowledge and connections within the country, and a thorough understanding of the expectations of overseas visitors, mean you are in the best possible hands to see this part of Rajasthan.

DATES

Rides are arranged from set dates between October and February, usually for 11 to 15 nights with tailor-made trips (for 2 or more), and shorter itineraries possible on request. Please see the dates overleaf and call us to discuss plans and availability. Extensions can easily be added to any ride itinerary with lots of options possible - a day or two to see the iconic Taj Mahal (included in some itineraries), a visit to one of India's wildlife reserves to search for tigers or add some time on the beach in Goa or the southern state of Kerala.

HORSES

The horses used are from Bonnie's private stables and are mainly pure-bred native Marwari horses (an elegant, spirited breed with lovely 'bell' shaped ears) or Kathiawari horses, with some Thoroughbred crosses. Many have been home bred and some are used for local endurance competitions, tent pegging and polo. Most are between 15hh and 16hh. They are slight and much narrower across the chest and in general build, and quite a bit thinner, than horses in the west but they are an upright, athletic, energetic and forward going ride. They are also responsive and sensitive yet sensible, brave and calm making them a real pleasure to ride. Most are trained to neck rein like polo ponies.

TACK

Military saddles (based on an English style but with a short leg panel) are used and saddle-bags are provided where necessary.

RIDING

Most itineraries are a combination of riding and sightseeing as there is so much to see in this part of India. Most itineraries include about 6 days riding, with about 4 to 6 hours in the saddle each riding day, and breaks to stretch your legs or if the terrain requires to lead your horse, and also for lunch and sightseeing. The daily riding programme always varies with the route and time of year - if it is hot there will be a longer break in the middle of the day for lunch and to rest for example. Rides are lead by Bonnie himself or by Mallyka or one of their English speaking colleagues, accompanied by at least one local back-up rider for support. Grooms also follow by jeep to attend the horses during the ride, at night and at lunch stops. The back-up team is lead by the wonderful, very experienced Sunayana (who manages Dundlod and the camps). Group size depends on the trip but will usually be a maximum of 14 riding guests.

WEIGHT LIMIT

The rider weight limit is about 95kg (15 stone) but please contact us if you are close to this to ensure suitable horses are available. Some heavier experienced riders may be taken but only by prior arrangement.

PACE

The riding pace varies with the terrain and itinerary chosen, but the rides are usually at a well balanced, moderate pace overall with plenty of good opportunities for fast canter on sandy going, where the horses can spread out. As is the army habit in India, most of the riding is at a walk or canter, with many of the horses used to moving directly from walk into canter. The pace on tailor-made rides can be varied to suit.

RIDING EXPERIENCE

Rides are aimed at reasonably experienced, confident riders. To take part you should be comfortable, balanced and secure in the saddle and able to control a well-schooled horse in open country at a walk, trot and fast canter. Marwari horses are naturally a fairly spirited, sensitive breed (like a small English Thoroughbred) and participants should be confident, relaxed riders, used to riding a forward going horse outside, with a group of horses, across varied terrain and through different environments. You will also enjoy your trip much more if you are riding fit - some rides include quite long hours in the saddle and long, fast canters as a group over varied terrain. If you do not ride regularly at home, we recommend concentrated practice in the months before you go to get used to the riding hours.

TERRAIN

The rides take you through the open, sandy, desert-like scrub of Marwar where the terrain is generally excellent for riding - largely flat with sandy tracks bordered by sand dunes, rough scrub, acacia and Khejri trees. You will also ride through rural farmland (again largely on flat, sandy going) where crops of millet, wheat and chick-peas are grown by local farmers who work the land with cattle and camels. Early in the season, before the crops are harvested, you will ride along dirt and sand tracks and around the fields; after the Diwali festival in early November, when the crops have been harvested, there is more scope to cut across ploughed fields. In the countryside there may be chances to see game such as Black Buck, Chinkara deer and Nilgai antelope, the largest of India's antelope. All routes pass through small villages, settlements and larger towns, where riding is on dirt or tarmac roads, watching local people as they carry on with their everyday lives. You also ride past monuments and temples, see local women and children collecting water at village wells and men and women working in the fields. The local people especially the children, are very friendly and love to watch the horses pass.

ACCOMMODATION

Accommodation on the rides is in a combination of hotels, ancient Forts and 'Havelis' (merchants houses) that have been converted to hotels, other comfortable hotels or in private tented camps set up ahead by the staff. Some hotels were once private palaces and are renowned for their unique setting, imposing architecture and wonderful (though often faded) grandeur. Udaipur's floating Lake Palace Hotel is probably the best known, but Rajasthan is full of lesser known, charming and often intricately built forts, castles and palaces, many of which are now used as hotels.

Most rides start with a night or two at Dundlod Fort, Bonnie's family home, and an imposing building dating back to the 1700s. Sadly the Fort itself is now rather dilapidated and run down, but it is an interesting place to stay giving a real insight into how the old Indian families used to live. It has a large central grass courtyard and an attractive pillared reception area, decorated with frescos and colourful carpets. There is a good-sized dining room and another attractive, walled courtyard, often hung with colourful banners, that is used as an atmospheric outside dining hall. Winding staircases lead through thick walls to the various guest bedrooms, all of which are different. Bedrooms are simple each with its own small bathroom with flush loo and rudimentary shower (- a pipe with shower attachment on the wall, open to the room (not enclosed in a separate shower unit) with water draining along the tiled floor). Beds are fairly narrow / small with traditional mattresses - these seem thin and hard at first but generally give a good nights' sleep! Bedrooms at the other smaller hotels and family run 'havelis' are also often simple, in similar style and although plumbing and décor can be tired, hotels are carefully chosen; all are different with a particular highlight such as a beautiful building, setting or wonderfully personalised atmosphere to make up for this.

Some of the hotels used are bigger, luxurious and newly renovated, with magnificent reception and dining halls, swimming pools and gardens. Several offer extras such as Ayurvedic massages and spa treatments. All hotel rooms have private bathroom with loo and shower or bath. Hot / running water and electricity is reliable in most, although bear in mind that services in rural India are not as reliable or sophisticated as in the west and occasionally supplies may be limited or interrupted. When camps are set up, large, round, walk-in tents are used with comfortable camp beds, bed-side tables and fold up chairs or stools provided. Camps have a separate portable shower and loo unit(s) shared between guests and sometimes the camp is set up in the ramparts of an ancient fort or building so there will be a good water supply and flush loos nearby. Rates assume twin-shared accommodation but single rooms / tents are usually possible at a supplement. Note that if you are travelling alone you will need to book a single room (and pay the supplement) unless you are prepared to share with another guest AND there is definitely someone to share with you.

MEALS

The food on the rides is good and great care is taken in its preparation. Meals are a combination of local and European food, with spicy local dishes toned down to suit western palates. The day may start with a breakfast of cereal or porridge, toast and eggs if you wish, served with tea, coffee or fruit juice. Lunch is often a hot buffet-style picnic out riding, with a choice of local dishes such as soup, rice and various curries, samosas, chapattis and lentil dahl. It is generally served from a table, then eaten seated on small fold-up chairs set around a large picnic mat. Dinner, again often buffet style, is a chance to taste some of the more elaborate specialities of the region and is either eaten at your hotel, or when camping, at a long table or around a campfire. Some bottled mineral water is included (one bottle per person per day - the limit is to discourage waste and that it is used, rather than thrown if slightly warm for example!) and further supplies as well as beer, wine and a selection of soft drinks can be bought for an extra charge. Although Indian wine is not the best and is quite expensive, the local beers are excellent!

WEATHER

Rides are run during Rajasthan's winter and spring months. December and January are winter and days are usually dry, sunny and, except in windy weather, warm enough for shirtsleeves with average daytime temperatures in the 20s C. It can be cold at night however, particularly in the desert, with temperatures sometimes dropping to freezing. March is the start of spring and hot weather usually sets in towards the end of March / April. In early March days are warm to hot, although you may need a light pullover at night. October is usually quite hot

The meeting point for all rides is Delhi where the first night is usually spent so you can arrive at any time on the first day. On MOST rides you return to Delhi by internal flight or transfer in the late afternoon / early evening of the last day so flights out should be late evening on the last day.

Please liaise with us before making travel plans.

There are direct flights from London to Delhi with British Airways, Virgin, Air India and Vistara. Rates vary with the season and airline but expect to pay between £600 and £900 per person for an economy return. Please call us if you would like further information on flights. (Our ATOL number for flight bookings is 6213)

GENERAL VISA & HEALTH INFORMATION

(NB this is a brief outline - further information will be sent to you if you make a confirmed booking)

Visas British Passport holders require a visa to visit India and you will need to arrange this in advance either by applying for an e-visa, or by applications to VF Services (UK) Limited (the Indian High Commission now out-sources visa applications). Online applications take about a week to process plus postal time. We will send more visa information once your booking is confirmed.

Health No inoculations are legally required for India if travelling from Europe but the TravelHealthPro website (NaTHNaC) recommends most travellers are up to date with inoculations against Tetanus, Typhoid and Hepatitis A. Inoculations against Cholera, Hepatitis B, Japanese Encephalitis, Tuberculosis and Rabies may also be recommended in some cases. Although parts of India are high risk for Malaria, most of Rajasthan is rated low risk. You may still be advised to take anti-Malaria tablets however and should consult a health professional for further and more detailed advice.
